Optimism grows for fire base relocation

Chad Ingram
Staff reporter

The reeve of Algonquin Highlands is still optimistic the Ministry of Natural Resources will move its local fire management base from Haliburton to the Stanhope Airport.

Reeve Carol Moffatt, along with Deputy-reeve Liz Danielsen and township chief administrative officer Angie Bird, met with a ministry representative June 16.

After a meeting with the ministry scheduled for the spring was cancelled due to inclement weather, Moffatt joked that the township has been "trying to aggressively date the MNR . . . borderline stalking."

Watch for these books to hit the big screen

Coles'Notes
Catherine Coles
Branch Services Librarian

When it comes to books and their movie adaptations, the same usually falls short. That said, even with disappointment looming, I am always excited when I learn that a book I have enjoyed will be released on the big screen. This summer, there are three film adaptations opening that I am especially eager to see.

Sarah's Key, which will have a limited release on July 22nd, was adapted from Louise De Launo's heart-breaking novel of the same title. This story follows a journalist named Julia, played in the movie by Krysten Scott Thomas, covering the 40th anniversary of the 1962 roundup of Jews by the French police at the Vel d'Hiv in Paris. In recounting this dark episode, she embarks upon an investigation that leads her to long hidden family secrets and to the ordeal of Sarah, a young girl caught up in the past.

Come to the cycling festival
Shredding Gears Cycling Festival on Saturday, June 25, 11:30 am to 1:30 pm, at Head Lake Park in Haliburton. The festival features live music, paid lunch catered by Riders' chef Chris Gail, and a BMX trials riding demonstration. Drop your bike for a free maintenance checkup. Before the festival starts, a variety of guided rides will be offered.

Local firefighters dispatched to park crash

Three people were killed in a vehicle collision in Algonquin Park June 14.
According to reports, the collision occurred just before 3 p.m., when an SUV driven by a Richmond Hill man crossed the centreline of Highway 60 in Finlayson Township into the path of a van.

The Richmond Hill man and two passengers were killed and nine others were injured.
Firefighters from Algonquin Highlands attended the scene.
There are no pending charges.

A wiser boater today – lifejackets save lives

“It happened so quickly. One minute you’re having the most fun of your life, the next minute you’re struggling for your life”.
That was Dave Kimpinski’s comment after nearly drowning in a boating accident. Dave and his young son, Curtis, were pulling Dave’s niece Amanda on an inflatable tube in their small outboard powered boat.
Suddenly Dave saw the large wake from another boat right in front of them. He leaned across to prevent his son Curtis from falling in but instead went overboard himself. Dave wasn’t wearing a lifejacket. His boat started to make lazy circles while Curtis cried out for his dad.
Amanda saw her uncle struggling to stay afloat and began to swim after him. Fortunately, Amanda was prepared for the water and was wearing a lifejacket. She reached her uncle and Dave grabbed onto her.
Curtis, meanwhile, pulled the safety lanyard on the motor just like he’d seen his dad do and the boat stopped moving. Amanda and Dave were able to get back to their boat and climb aboard.
Dave was lucky; lucky that Amanda was wearing a life-jacket and able to help him. He was also lucky that his little boy managed to stop their boat.

your life. Today’s lifejackets look and feel nothing like the lifejackets and vests of even 10 years ago. Think of the first cellphones – how bulky and awkward they were. Think of today’s mobile phones: sleek, slim, lightweight.
Materials used in the construction of today’s floatation devices are lighter, stronger and more comfortable to wear. And the new, approved inflatable personal flotation devices lie flat around your shoulders like a collar.
Many times boaters will proudly tell boating safety officials that they always have their lifejackets on board their boats, just like the law demands.
The CSBC applauds this but reminds those boaters that a lifejacket isn’t intended to save the life of the boat. It’s meant to save the life of the human being on the boat!
So, if you fall in the water without your lifejacket on your body, that fine sense of pride in having lifejackets on board won’t help keep you floating. And in the case of an inflatable PFD, the law requires it be worn while on board.
Not long ago, the CSBC conducted an experiment. The Council selected roughly half a dozen volunteers, both young and old and asked them to jump into a swimming pool and, once in the water, attempt to get into a lifejacket.
All the participants said afterwards how difficult it was to perform that seemingly simple task. Few of them managed to select lifejackets that were the right size when they were in the pool.
Rob Hall, one of the volunteers, summed it up best when he remarked “I think it’s way too tough to put on a lifejacket in the water, to have to put it on after your boat’s flipped over”. And if it was tough for volunteers in a swimming pool, imagine how difficult it would be in a real-life situation in a lake, river or ocean with individuals overcome by panic and fear. None of these Canadian boaters and volunteers could possibly have imagined such deadly scenarios occurring to them. After all, what are the chances?

Dave Kimpinski will tell you today that he is a much wiser boater. Our loved ones are precious and unfortunately none of us can predict when potential disaster might strike. Dave Kimpinski knows that firsthand. A fun day of tubing nearly turned deadly because he decided not to wear a lifejacket.
When the Canadian Safe Boating Council (CSBC) and SmartBoater.ca speak to Canadian boaters about the importance of wearing your lifejacket there is no gentle way to say it. Not wearing your lifejacket could cost you Thankfully, the chances are small. But why take that chance when it involves your life? You may not get a second chance. Make the smart choice. Wear it. And don’t forget to get a PFD for your infant. They’re available for children in the 9-25 lb range. You can also purchase a PFD for your pet.

For more information on safe and responsible boating practices visit Canada’s educational boating website www.smartboater.ca.

County could use emergency shelter, study suggests

Jenn Watt
Editor

Haliburton County needs an emergency shelter for those in financial hardship, a study of the area's housing challenges has found.

For low-income residents, any sudden change in income threatens a real possibility of homelessness and with that, a departure from the Highlands, Trent University student Daniel Fahrur writes in his BA research paper.

"There is no local space to which individuals in housing crisis can be referred. This further contributes to the issue of out-migration as individuals forced to move into temporary shelters must leave the county to larger urban centres such as Peterborough and Lindsay," the study reads.

Sponsored by Places for People through U-Links Centre for Community-Based Research, Fahrur's study included interviews with 17 service providers, community leaders and housing advocates examining the area's affordable housing situation.

Places for People president Fay Martin was impressed with Fahrur's work, which created a first step in academic research on rural housing.

"He makes the point that housing in Ontario ... means urban housing [in most research]. The special needs of rural housing are invisible," she said in an interview.

"He made the strongest point I've seen yet for temporary housing," Martin said, noting that while Haliburton County has a small number of emergency spots for women fleeing violence, there must be something for the wider population.

There is a complicating factor, however.

Creating temporary housing would help those in emergency situations, but if there are few affordable apartments to rent once the emergency's over, where do these people go?

That leads to Fahrur's second recommendation: bylaw reform.

"It is recommended that the various municipalities cater to the aforementioned local trend towards second units such as basement apartments and granny flats," Fahrur writes.

"Amendments of this type have been identified in the Province of Ontario's 2010 Long-term Affordable Housing Strategy as an important step to increase provincial development of rental units amongst municipalities."

If it were made easier to divide shelter into many dwellings, a more robust housing market might develop, Martin agreed.

One of the more surprising findings in his research was a strong culture of home ownership in the Highlands, Fahrur said.

"One of the things that really stood out to me was the role of the culture of home ownership and how that plays into the development of rental units," he said.

"There's a view that renters aren't great people."

That stigma, coupled with the financial benefits of owning a home decrease the pool of potential renters, Martin said.

"If you do own a house [that provides] economic stability. You can borrow against your house," she said. "People who can't afford to own houses become more at risk to lose out in the equity thing. They are more likely to get poorer."

But she notes that those in precarious positions aren't always best off owning a home.

"In Haliburton County, given that we're poor and given that our economy is fairly uncertain ... it may not be a very good asset, because you could get left having to leave in order to find employment," she said.

While Martin doesn't think her organization is solving the affordable housing shortage in the county, she believes that the two units they provide low-income families in Haliburton is a small start.

Fahrur's research paper is much the same.

"It keeps a spotlight on the problem we are part of solving," she said.

Fahrur sees the potential for more academic work in Haliburton around the housing issue, but not by him.

He'd like to see research done that highlights the realities of those looking for, or using, affordable housing.

"I think that would be a very profitable next step for this type of research," he said.

"To take that to the next step and hear from the individuals struggling with housing and what they're struggling with would complement this research."

He noted that engaging with a "sensitive" population would likely be doctoral work, given the ethics approvals necessary through the university.

Places for People is holding its annual general meeting Wednesday, June 22 at the Minden United Church, 21 Newcastle St., at 7 p.m.

Fahrur will discuss his research there.

Discussions of the not-for-profit group's next housing project will also be discussed.

Resident requests use of tower road

Chad Ingram
Staff reporter

Algonquin Highlands council had a visit last week from a man who wants to use the Dorset lookout tower road as a means of getting construction machinery onto his nearby property, which has no road access.

Martin Arike spoke to councillors at their June 16 meeting and explained he would like permission to use the road as a temporary access path as he works on site preparation.

Arike had visited a previous council in 2005 with the same request but was denied.

"Going off Clifdene is a very long haul," Arike said, referring to a nearby roadway.

He would need use for three to six months.

Arike had documents signed by neighbours saying they approved of the concept, but with a number of caveats.

"I'm a little concerned with the comments from adjacent landowners," said Deputy-reeve Liz Danielsen, who also expressed worries about busyness at the tower and temporary access turning permanent.

There are other options for accessing the property, one being the use of the old Bobcaygeon Road, which is trail-like.

This option, which would include some tree removal, would require Arike to enter into an agreement with the township.

While such an agreement had been drawn up in 2005, township operations director Brian Whetstone said it was never signed.

Councillor Gordon Henderson wanted council to do what it could to help Arike.

"We need to help him find a solution," Henderson said, adding he saw the tower road option as most probable, if properly managed.

Reeve Carol Moffatt was fine with the idea of allowing temporary access, but expressed concern about people being able to get to the tower, particularly during the fall when the area's foliage brings thousands of people to the site.

As far as a permanent driveway, Moffatt said it was likely that would have to be built off the Clifdene series of roads.

A draft temporary use agreement will be drawn up for council's consideration.

Use would require a performance bond from Arike to pay for any damage to the road.

Algonquin Highlands township pays off line of credit

Chad Ingram
Staff reporter

The follow are brief reports from items discussed at the June 16 meeting of Algonquin Highlands council:

Councillors voted to pay off the line of credit taken out by the last council in relation to the airport development project.

A report from treasurer Tammy McKelvey noted more than $350,000 of the more than $433,000 surplus from 2010 was a result of the borrowing that was established for the project.

Councillors voted to transfer $195,000 from the airport debt retirement account to the line of the credit and nearly $420,000 from the township's working funds reserve.

This means the line of credit will be completely paid off.

Agreement with province signed

Councillors voted to enter into an agreement with the provincial government allowing it to utilize municipal lands in the area of Oxtongue Lake Narrows bridge as it carries out repairs on the structure.

The project will include the replacement of the bridge's deck on its existing alignment; the construction of a temporary one-lane detour bridge; new drainage infrastructure; and elevating Highway 60 by 1.5 metres west of the bridge.

The agreement goes until 2017.

Dealing with Crown Lake

The township in conjunction with the MNR is moving forward with its plan to try to reduce instances of extreme littering and partying at a camping area on Crown Lake near the township's northern boundary.

There have been complaints about activities at the site for years.

Township trails coordinator Mark Coleman said 27 signs advocating clean camping have been manufactured, so many because there is an expectation they will be ripped down.

Reeve Carol Moffatt had recently taken a trip to the site.

"It's a disgrace," Moffatt said, explaining she'd seen woods dotted with used toilet paper, piles of garbage including broken chairs, barbecues and toilet seats on the beach and fires left burning.

Coleman said the issue is difficult to deal with because the Public Lands Act does little to address such a circumstance.

There are no restrictions on the number of people that can use a campsite and people are permitted to stay for up to 21 days.

On ode to the library

PEOPLE BECOME LIBRARI-
ANS for one reason: fame.
OK, so that's not true, but it is time to shine the spotlight on the Haliburton County Public Library and the woman at its helm.

At last week's Algonquin Highlands council meeting, library CEO Bessie Sullivan presented councillors with her 2010 report, as she has been doing with all of the county's municipal councils.

The report is a good news story charting a second consecutive year of incredible growth at the county's library.

Circulation jumped to just under 80,000 in 2009 and took another huge leap to more than 116,000 in 2010.

That's an increase of 45 per cent.
That's impressive stuff.

The library has more than 6,660 cardholders in a county with a permanent population of just 16,000 and last year it added more than 8,700 items to its catalogue.

Sure, the new, bright and modern branches that opened in Minden and Haliburton Village in 2009 must have had some impact in drawing people to the library, but much of its success seems to be coming from Sullivan herself.

She's been on a mission, tirelessly promoting the library and educating all who will listen, making sure people are aware that the county has not eight libraries, but one, with eight branches.

Seasonal residents, too, are eligible for library cards, she likes to stress.

Increasing incorporation of technology and expanded programming are helping to change the public image of the library branches.

They are more than storage lockers for dusty and antiquated books.

They are all-encompassing entertainment and information bases.

They are hubs of the community.
They can even be fun.

What will happen in the chapter of 2011?

Who knows.

But the story of the local library is turning out to be quite a page-turner.

Note: In recent weeks, we've received a number of lengthy letters to the editor. For reasons of space, please keep letters a maximum of 400 words.

Get it together councillors

To the editor,

I read with dismay the latest account of the goings on at the recent Minden Hills council meeting. Clearly, we have two competing sides, one representing the former council and the other the most recently elected. Both are entrenched and the council has become dysfunctional.

This cannot be allowed to continue. It is imperative that council find a way to resolve their differences and become more productive.

At this point, the losers are we, the taxpayers.

So, get it together councillors.
We deserve better.

To the editor,

On June 11 and 12 my wife Susan and
I participated in the Ride To Conquer Cancer event, a 200-kilometre bike ride between Toronto and Niagara Falls. There were 4,610 riders and donations totaled $17.5 million for The Campbell Family pital. We want to thank all the generous and supportive people in the Minden and and made such a significant contribution towards this very successful event. Thank points of view

I made the cut!

ALL RIGHT, I WASN'T SURE if I should write about this. But then I came to my senses. After all, Julyna is a legitimate event created to support a very worthy cause – the fight against cervical cancer. And that's especially important, since this is the second most common cancer in women aged 20 to 44.

Getting the OK for this column wasn't easy, however. Since this is about female anatomy, my editor was worried and begged me to show a little maturity for once.

Naturally, I agreed. So let's begin by explaining that participants are being asked to shave their hoo-hoos in order to raise funds. Normally, I wouldn't use such complex medical terms but, as I said, my editor wants me to take the high road on this one.

In any case, participating women will trim their pubic hair – or at least say they did – and you pledge a donation. The event is in response to Movember, in which men are encouraged to grow moustaches to support the fight against prostate cancer.

The real difference is that this is about hoo-hoos – an area that, unlike me, the general public never seems very comfortable discussing.

Which is precisely why you've got to give the organizers credit. Julyna is a brilliant attention-getter that just begs for news coverage – actually any kind of coverage.

The name is obviously derived from a combination of July and vagina, which is why I suppose it could have just as easily been called Januhairy.

No matter what you call it, researching it is a fun way for columnists like me to spend the day.

The website www.julyna.com actually has a design page where several different hairstyles and templates are offered.

There's the Rising Sun, the Side Part, the Brazilian and my favourite – since it's obviously helpful – the Arrow. Most interestingly, there are other cuts named after famous people like the Charlie Chaplin, the Barbara Bush and the David Suzuki.

You know you've hit the height of fame when they've named a pubic haircut in your honour.

And that's why I was so thrilled when event organizer Vanessa Willson responded to a desperate email and gave me the green light to design a pubic haircut in my own likeness.

As I told her, the Steve Galea is a lot

Steve Galea
Beyond 35

like the David Suzuki but only a little sparser at the top and not nearly as grey yet. It's impish, debonair and yet still very playful. And, coincidentally, it's exactly the right height.

It is any wonder Willson said yes?

Now, I've won many awards for humour and column writing. I've won little league trophies, bake sale raffles and even a few participant ribbons, but this surely must be my finest hour.

I know that compared to Suzuki and Chaplin, my part is just bush league, but even so. One day when the grandkids ask what grandpa's greatest legacy is, I'll have an answer – provided, their parents, don't stop me from telling them first.

Bird's-foot trefoil

ONE OF THE SHAMEFUL SECRETS of my life in the country is that there are no flower beds on Sapsucker Ridge. Not unless you count the patches of daffodils in my yard that help me decide when spring has arrived.

Now it is summer, or began to be yesterday. Today the days begin to get shorter, and it's all downhill from here. Next thing you know, roadside asters will be in bloom, the last roses of Haliburton's summers.

As for the tame flowers, I've decided I haven't the patience for them and so I let nature do my work for me and, to tell the truth, it does a much better job than I ever did.

There was an early June after I first built my cabin in the woods that I dug a narrow pit at one end and filled it with composted sheep manure and soil far too rich to be from Haliburton and called it a flower bed.

Then I planted. Sunflowers. Bells of Ireland. Morning glories. Poppies. Alyssum. Mignonette, bright eyes and catchfly, whatever they were supposed to be. The opened seed packets still stapled on an inside woodshed wall, or at least they were until I took them down to write this column.

I don't know what I was thinking. Most of what I planted never came up and most of what did come up disappeared the next day and most of what did come up never got as far as flowering.

I developed a theory that whenever some plant poked its head through the soil surface, something grabbed it by the roots and pulled it back under.

This was years before The Brown Dog Jiggs came along to restore order to the Ridge. The groundhog who lived under the generator shed regarded sunflower foliage as a gourmet treat.

A patient fellow, it would lie in ambush on the lip of its den, licking its lips, wait just long enough for an emerging stem to grow perhaps six inches tall and then nip it off at ground level.

About the only plant that actually produced a flower was something that I remember as rose mallow, though a garden-book surviving from those years tells me it couldn't have been.

For a year or two after that I tried transplants. Begonias were supposed to be unpalatable to squirrels and such and I suppose they were, but they never did much more than barely cling to life through the summer.

Neil Campbell
Back of Beyond

The most successful tame flowers on Sapsucker Ridge were those that arrived on their own, stayed a year or two and then moved on, like some ungrateful vagrant. The best of the lot might have been the peonies that came out of nowhere and resided on the inside of a driveway corner for a few years.

But as I went along I began to notice that my landscape was doing perfectly well without my interference and ever since I have let nature do my planting. Adopt that policy and nothing is a weed.

Not the hawkweeds, orange or yellow, that adorn old fields in the neighborhood. Not the milkweeds and the monarch butterflies that depend on them. Not the Joe-Pye-weed nor the ironweed.

Not the yarrow. Not the buttercups or blue-eye grasses in my yard, not berries be they black or rasp or thimble, not common primroses by my driveway, not goldenrods in meadows, not blue flags by beaver ponds.

Not the shoulder-high thistles that rear their purple heads among my woodpiles and prosper there, unmolested, admired and loved by me.

Weeds? It's all in your point of view. All of them weeds where you don't want them. All of them flowers in Haliburton. The perspective rests on the human wish for control.

Plants of waste places, say the wildflower guides, and The Brown Dog says, of course. If it was not waste, it would be packed tight with string beans or nasturtiums.

No gardener could improve on a verge I know. The roadside edge is jumbled with the purple of vetch, the yellow of bird's-foot trefoil, the white of daisy, the green balloon of bladder campion.

Intruders. Plants come from away. Just like Jiggs. Just like me.

A collection of Neil Campbell's columns, Cell Phones and Sap Buckets, is available in stores across Haliburton County.

Reeve Reid responds and looks to the township's future

To the Editor,

Despite our challenges, for the past seven months, your new council has been working very hard to address some fundamental issues and find opportunities for growth and development. One of the main issues is expenses which escalated significantly over the term of the previous council. Total wages increased seven per year from 2006 through 2010. I'm fairly certain that few in our community experienced that kind of wage growth during the recent economic crisis.

Employee benefits costs increased 10 per cent per year during the same period. The net tax subsidy required to support the Minden Hills Cultural Centre went from $156,000 in 2006 to $320,000 in 2010.

So what are we doing about it? The 2011 budget increase is 3.98 per cent, the lowest increase in the past four years. Cultural Centre net spending is capped at $300,000. We have recently changed our benefits agent of record in an effort to negotiate better costs without reducing coverage. Wage increases will be subject to much closer scrutiny to ensure we reward good performance but stay within our means.

We have found an alternative to chipping at the Scotch Line landfill which will deliver significant savings and extend the life of the site. We learned that our budgeted amount of $60,000 for the official plan update was significantly higher than what other municipalities in the county paid for similar work and found a more affordable alternative.

We've heard from many in the community that if we want to compete with Haliburton we need to address the dilapidated buildings and junk-strewn properties that send the wrong signals to prospective residents, business investors and developers. Our proposed property standards by-law is modeled after Dysart's very effective by-law that has been in place for years. Thank you to our staff for your valuable assistance with the development of these initiatives over the past 7 months.

Last Friday, we received very good news from the Ministry of Transportation Ontario. The long-standing access issue for the planned Canadian Tire store has been resolved. Thank you to the professionals at MTO, our MPP Rick Johnson and Transportation Minister Kathleen Wynne for their assistance on this over the past five months. We are now one step closer to having this store and hope to get good news from Canadian Tire soon.

The new water tower is full and will be operational in a couple of weeks and having sufficient water pressure is essential for further growth and development not only for Canadian Tire but for any growth and development. Your economic development committee is exploring many opportunities and I'm confident we're going to attract new business and residential development to Minden Hills. As our Treasurer rightly points out, the key to financial sustainability for Minden Hills is growth.

In conclusion, I want to say that it has been and remains my intention to encourage cooperation and productivity from all members of council allowing us to continue to move forward in our efforts to make Minden Hills a more prosperous community for all of us.

Make it Minden looking for support

Rebecca Potter
Special to the Times

Make It Minden is looking for some hosts to prepare some evening family programming for a few hours. Depending on the host, the event will take place on either Tuesday or Wednesday evenings.

This will be Make It Minden's second summer playing host to events for the community to enjoy.

Some hosts have confirmed events for the night, including the Minden Lions Club with the new owner of River Cone, the Minden girl guides, as well as the volunteer fire fighters.

"It's programming to give the community something to do in the summer time when they're in town," Litwin said.

The event is in place to help the downtown area, but also so that people can come out and see what their town has to offer.

"It's an opportunity to get the community together," Litwin said.

It is free for the public to come out and participate in the events, and most of the events are also free.

"It's an opportunity to get the community together, and to come out and enjoy the programming that is provided," Litwin said.

Anyone thinking of become a host and helping out should contact Lynda Litwin at 705-286-2911 ext. 235 for more information.

Wildcats' Den gives students a taste of business world

Chad Ingram
Staff reporter

While the straight-talking business tycoons of CBC's Dragons' Den were not in Minden last week, some would-be entrepreneurs were busy pitching invention ideas to a panel of judges.

The finale of Archie Stouffer Elementary School's Wildcats' Den was held in the school's gymnasium on June 16.

Last week's showdown was the culmination event, after Grade 4 through 6 classes held their own competitions and sent on the winners.

Marshall Petry and Kyle Wallace were promoting their solar-powered, water-spraying toothbrush while Maria Perrin was hoping judges would bite at her electronic guard dog.

Keagan Gilham's creation was a combination snowboard/skateboard with removable wheels.

"It's the best board in history and it only cost $200," he told judges.

Composing the judging panel were principal Traci Hubbert, teacher Katie Bjelis and Rick Lowes of Moose FM and the contest was also a bit of an exercise in mathematics, decision-making and patent law.

Owen Smith and Aiden Garbutt's case was for their electronic reclining chair, which, using a touchscreen in the armrest, could perform a number of functions, including taking out the trash.

Chad Ingram Times staff

Kyle Wallace eyes up the competition as contestants of last week's Wildcats' Den wait for the verdict from judges Rick Lowes, Traci Hubbert and Katie Bjelis.

"I think this is possibly the greatest invention ever," Lowes told the pair, wondering if the chair was also able to fetch beverages from the refrigerator.

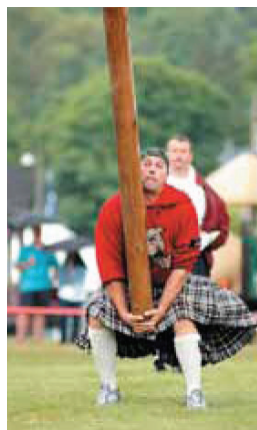

Danielle Allison and Ati Baricz were promoting "the lawnmower of the future," created by Dane Roylance, which came equipped with a cup-holder and automatic hedge trimmers. In the end, the judges took a shine to Marshall and Kyle's toothbrush.

The students had been learning about the art of persuasiveness.

"Why not do it in a fun way?" said literacy coach Nancy Kampstra, who organized the event.

Objectiveness in art: language leads to understanding

➤ Talk at Agnes Jamieson Gallery explores how we react to art

George Farrell
Special to the Times

Objectiveness in Art was the topic last Thursday evening at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery as curator Laurie Carmount coordinated the latest edition of the ongoing series of informative talks on the subject of art.

When most people are confronted by art that they're not familiar with their initial reaction is usually visceral; they either like what they see or they don't. It's a totally subjective response.

While a visceral subjective reaction to art is a very valid response that some artists strive to achieve, Carmount's cleverly conceived talk to a small but enthusiastically vocal and participatory audience, led them down the path away from that initial reaction and towards an objectiveness built around the language of art. The aim was a better understanding of various works whose finer points were not immediately apparent on first viewing.

Carmount's first step in achieving her goal was to give each person in attendance a sheet of paper on which they were to write their immediate reactions, basically a yea or nay, to 25 images of different pieces of art which were projected individually on a screen.

Then by introducing the audience to some artistic concepts such as line, shape, form, texture, space, movement, harmony, balance, rhythm, composition and symbolism Carmount provided the language by which intelligent discussion could ensue.

Then each image was projected again, and using "fresh eyes" from the new knowledge, it was truly amazing to discover that initial subjective reactions to various pieces, were, on a second more informed viewing, supplanted by appreciative objective interpretations. Within the space of 90 minutes, people actually came to enjoy art that they had initially dismissed. Some nays became yeas. It was an entertaining and fascinating experience.

40% of business year-round: study

Rebecca Potter
Special to the Times

The Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce completed their business retention and expansion survey and they held a meeting to release the results on June 13. The survey included profiling business operations, opportunities and challenges in the county, as well as an action plan including ways to strategically grow existing business and attract new business and investments.

One of the most interesting facts from the survey was that 40 per cent of the businesses consider the county and their business to be year-round.

"Those progressive businesses in the county now look at us as being year round, and I think that's significant. It's a change of mind-set that starting to show within the community, and if we don't nurse that along, then you're enthusiasm and optimism wanes," said Dennis Casey.

The survey includes 98 businesses in the county balanced across the four municipalities and business sectors, and the personal interviews were conducted from June 2010 to September 2010.

Larry Clarke, a chamber director, led the presentation, going over all the information provided by interviewing business and creating graphs and charts to access the needs of the community.

Another interesting fact from the survey was that 30 to 40 per cent of business were planning on expanding within the next two years, despite the difficult economy.

Some of the overall problems in the county were the lack of skilled workers, the costs of transportation and travel, and access to supplies. And even though almost half of the businesses surveyed said they were year-round, almost 40 per cent said that one of their biggest problems was seasonality with the community.

"One of the original views I had on getting the survey going was the fact that we have to try and promote business to business. A big role for the Chamber of Commerce is to promote business partnerships and lineages within the community and to enable business growth," said Clarke.

The council recognizes that every county has different needs, and with this information they will attempt to help the community grow by attending to what they need.

In the end, the chamber provided action plans for how local government can help businesses thrive by presenting them with what businesses really need. Included are plans for business support and development, workforce development, marketing and communication.

This, along with other key information tourism, the local community, markets and inputs, are provided within the survey. All the results are available to the public by going to www.haliburtonchamber.com

ASES students DARE to be great

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

Local students are promising a clean life after graduating from the DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program on Tuesday, June 21.

There were 48 Archie Stouffer Elementary School Grade 6 students that received their certificate of completion, including a program T-shirt, which was quickly covered with the scrawled names of their peers and the Ontario Provincial Police constables Sandy Adams and Mark McMaster, who was the DARE instructor.

These students participated in the eight-week program, which includes information and projects to educate the students about the dangers of drugs, alcohol abuse, gangs and violence, ending with a ceremony headed by the two constables and vice-principal Sheila Shauf, including students' skits, reports and statements.

McMaster, who has spent close to 10 years as the DARE instructor for the area, teaching more than 1,000 students, is retiring after serving more than 30 years.

Adams will assume his duties when he serves his last day this Friday.

The program has been offered at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School, Wilberforce Elementary School and ASES.

The police-led DARE program was founded in 1983 in Los Angeles and is held in schools in 43 countries around the world. Students between kindergarten and Grade 12 are eligible.

After 10 years, OPP constable Mark McMaster will not be the DARE instructor and will be replaced by OPP constable Sandy Adams. McMaster retires this Friday.

Luncheon for hard-working volunteers

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

It takes a village to raise a child and a team of community partners to run a student nutrition program.

That was the message at the annual Food for Kids volunteer appreciation luncheon held at the Bonnie View Inn on June 16.

The countywide program provides nutritious meals and snacks to children in elementary schools through the help of volunteers and partnering organizations.

"I have the privilege of seeing the difference this program makes," said JD Hodgson Elementary School principal Elaine Fournier. By offering proper nutrition to students, the program is playing a role in the betterment of their future development, said Fournier.

"You guys are making sure no child is coming to school hungry," she said.

Gail Stelter, chairperson of the program's steering committee, thanked all those who have donated their time and helped raise money.

"The steering committee is responsible for raising $30,000. Of that total Brad and Bob Park have donated $10,000 in funds and donations. This program couldn't run without the Parks," Shelter said.

She thanked the volunteers who were moving on from the program, humorously instructing them to find two new volunteers to replace them. This year the program was under the direction of Jenna Burnett, coordinator of Food for Kids. Burnett explained that beginning this fall her goal is to try to expand the program, offering it five days a week in every school in the county.

"That would be an amazing achievement."

Enviro-heroes honoured

Len Pizze
Special to the Times

They may be self-effacing and their activities widely different, but the individuals and groups who were honoured as enviro-heroes at the Haliburton Highlands Land Trust's fourth annual Wild About Nature gala Saturday night share at least one important thing in common. Each of them believes passionately in protecting Haliburton's natural environment for future generations and enjoying it in ways that do no harm.

The gala also was an occasion to celebrate the success of the land trust, which recently acquired its third important piece of land and now protects and acts as stewards of almost 600 acres of ecologically diverse and significant land in Haliburton County.

The people who donated that land were honoured with the presentation of what the trust board has named the Silver Birch Award. A striking sculpture of a tree clinging to piece of Haliburton County bedrock, the award was created by board member Marjorie Cartwright and presented to Bruce Carruthers, the Dahl family, and Dr. Donald A. Smith.

Carruthers, who is now in his 80s and was unable to be present, donated a 22 acre island in Kennis Lake to the trust in 2007, to honour his late wife Norah. The island is jointly managed by the land trust and the Kennis Lake Cottage Owners' Association. An endowment fund created to meet expenses related to the island in perpetuity is now fully funded, trust board chair Shelia Ziman told the large audience of supporters who attended the gala at Camp Wanakita.

In 2009 the trust was given what is now its signature property, the 500 acre Dahl family forest which straddles 2.7 kilometres of the Burnt River south of Gelert. While the Dahls now live in western Canada, and so could not be present, neighbouring property owner Tom McCauley accepted the award on the Dahl's behalf and read brief

Six local organizations and individuals were honoured by the land trust at its Wild About Nature gala on Saturday night at Camp Wanakita. From left, John McDonald, president of Haliburton Nordic Trails Association; Sheila Ziman, chairperson of the land trust; Erin Lynch, recipient of the arts category award; Shannon Blanchard of Camp Wanakita, which received the education award; and Laura Redman, parent of Quinn Salverda of the HHSS Eco Team. remarks from Peter Dahl, son of Peggy Dahl, now 93, and her husband who purchased the forest 55 years ago.

"I had no idea what he had in mind, but dad had a vision," Peter wrote. "With hard work and no less expense he planted trees and protected the land, the beginnings of a family stewardship that has continued throughout my life."

"I cannot say how proud I am that this has now become a nature reserve sheltering a rich ecology, including some rare and threatened species."

Because of their connection to, and love for, the property, the family decided "we could no more sell the Dahl forest than you could sell your child," Peter wrote. "It isn't easy to let the Dahl Forest go, but where better than to the protection of the land trust and a community of people who care, as we do, about the stewardship of natural habitats and their wild inhabitants."

"That is why we made our gift."

Dahl expressed the hope that his family, "like other donors to the land trust, has helped to set an example to those with similar devotion to their wilderness properties."

"Joining together we can build a community legacy and make a lasting difference to the ecological health, beauty and richness of Haliburton County," he concluded.

The third honouree was Dr. Donald A. Smith, who this year donated a 72-acre forested property bordering a wetland complex on the Burnt River to the land trust.

Smith, who was present to accept the award, noted that the donation was made in honour of his late wife Lorraine, whose family have been long-time cottagers on Lake Kashagawigamog, and with whom he shared a love of Haliburton County throughout their 54-year marriage.

Also prominent in the evening's agenda was the presentation of six Enviro-Hero awards, designed by local artist Mary Ann Barkhouse, to local individuals and organizations whose goals and activities support and enhance environmentally responsible principles.

The award for stewardship was presented to the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association for three projects it champions: the fish hatchery which to date has placed approximately 750,000 trout in local lakes; the winter deer feeding program; and its efforts to clean up access points on more than 50 area lakes.

In the education category the Enviro Hero Award went to YMCA Camp Wanakita, which is dedicated to providing a wide range of programs that connect campers to the natural world that surrounds the camps' Koshlong Lake location.

The award for the arts was presented to Erin Lynch, founder of The Art Hive collective in Maple Lake. A jewellery artist, Lynch's works are inspired by nature, and she teaches courses to children, infusing them with her love of the Highlands surroundings.

Under the category of health, the 2011 Enviro-Hero is the Haliburton Nordic Trails Association, a volunteer organization that creates, maintains and grooms an extensive network of cross-county ski trails at Glebe Park in Haliburton, Moosewoods, and the Twin Lakes trails north of Minden.

The business category award went to Patient News of Haliburton for its commitment to recycling and energy conservation, and for inculcating those values in its employees.

In the youth category, the award went to the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School Eco team. This self-directed group of enthusiastic teens, were successful in a grant application to install a solar panel on the school's outdoor scoreboard. They also planted a herb garden in the school's courtyard to promote the local foods movement, helped clean up the shoreline of Head Lake and presented workshops at an eco-summit at Bark Lake.

While these awards were directed at the wider community, the work of the land trust board's volunteers also was acknowledged by the evening's MC Jack Brezina, on behalf of the Ontario Trillium Foundation, which recently approved a $91,500 grant to help the trust carry out its goals, including more extensive studies of species at risk in Haliburton County, and a number of educational activities at the Dahl Forest.

Reeve excited by MNR base prospect

Moffatt asked the representative if the airport was in competition with any other potential sites and was told no.

However, it does seem there is now a possibility the base may remain at its current location.

The township is now waiting on a phone call from Infrastructure Ontario to find out what sort of amenities the MNR would require at the airport property.

"It's exciting," Moffatt said, adding she hoped the MNR project would be a moderate and publicly acceptable development option at the airport.

"We will talk with Infrastructure to see what they need and then council will decide if it's desirable, doable and appealing to the public."

The new council has yet to pass a decision on the fate of the controversial runway expansion project, for which the township was approved two-thirds federal and provincial funding of up to $3.6 million.

Moffatt noted the MNR has said it has no use for a 4,000-foot runway at the site.

If the MNR does decide to move its base to Stanhope, it would likely take three to five years for it to happen.

Last week, council renewed a contract with the MNR that allows the ministry to use the airport as a standby base.

The five-year contract is for approximately $25,000 a year, but Moffatt noted the fee is not the only way the agreement contributes to the economic life of the community.

"Firefighters who are landed here live and spend locally," she said.

Stewardship council guests talk land use

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

There are many ways land can be used and enjoyed. On June 8 the Haliburton Highlands Stewardship Council welcomed three guest speakers who delved into the different uses of land during a meeting at the fish hatchery.

A park warden at Queen Elizabeth II Wildlands Provincial Park, Chris Kaloudas, described the nature of the property, which reaches between Gravenhurst and Minden.

The park is managed by Ontario Parks and occupies five townships located in three municipalities, said Kaloudas.

Falling under the Provincial Parks and Reserve Act, the name of the park was changed following the Queen's jubilee visit in 2002.

According to Kaloudas, the park is creating a management plan.

"We want to preserve the integrity of the park as an ecosystem," he said.

The northern tip of the park extends to Scotch Line Road in Minden, said Kaloudas.

Local resident John Patterson introduced an upcoming project known as Abbey Gardens.

Located on Cranberry Lake Road, the project involves growing food locally, which Patterson believed could be accomplished in Haliburton County.

"My favourite example is that there is no need to buy garlic grown in China," he said.

Patterson said the garden would be both sustainable and sufficient and plans to have it operating by mid-2014.

"What if a site were designed to attract people to come and see what is possible?" asked Patterson.

Patterson acknowledged the difficulties that come with trying to grow your own food, adding he wasn't able to break even on vegetables he grew and sold last year and is likely to follow suit this year.

"The Tylers are right, it's not easy making money at growing food," said Patterson, referencing local farmers Jean and Godfrey Tyler.

He emphasized the garden would be a community project and run by a board of directors. Partners already on board included Fleming College, the Haliburton County Development Corporation and Hawk River Construction.

Rebecca Francis of the Muskoka Heritage Foundation rounded out the presentations by describing the operations of the organization.

The not-for-profit foundation collaborates with the Muskoka Heritage Trust and the Muskoka Watershed Council, she said.

The MHT's focus is to preserve private land, which accounts for 60 per cent of the region. The organization protects land through visits with private owners and by offering educational resources.

Stewardship is important both biologically and for future development, Francis said.

Seniors' games athletes get ready to celebrate end of season

Peter O'Connor
Special to the Times

For the past seven weeks at locations throughout the county, our seniors have walked, golfed, swam, volleyed and cycled their way to active living.

From darts and snooker to duplicate bridge and euchre they have kept minds sharp and fingers nimble. With more than 750 total participants competing at 15 different locations these summer games have been an unparalleled success.

What started with five-pin bowling on the first of May at the Fast Lane in Minden will end this coming Thursday at the Haliburton Legion when our seniors celebrate the end of the summer games with their banquet.

On June 13, 100 played the Blairhampton Golf Course for what has become the signature event of the senior games, their golf tournament.

All the participants had a crack at winning $15,000 for a Hole In One on the 17th being sponsored by Hudson Henderson Insurance of Minden. The next day, our tennis players braved the heat for the tennis championship. A few weeks prior to the golf, 90 participants were in Stanhope for a full day of bridge.

Many of this summer's winners will travel to Smith's Falls this August to compete in the first ever Eastern Ontario Regional senior summer games.

First time events this summer included bocce ball in West Guilford and cycling in Stanhope.

They were well attended and the county will be sending players and cyclists as part of the team going to the Ontario senior championships in Brampton next summer.

Another first time event was Pickleball, introduced to the county earlier in June at the arena in Minden.

Close to a hundred people attended and since that time a Pickleball league is already in full swing in Minden with a suitable location being looked for in Haliburton for an additional league.

With summer just starting, planning for Haliburton winter games has already begun. The OSGA has just announced the next Ontario Senior Winter Games (Winterfest 2013) have been awarded to the town of Huntsville.

In order to prepare our team for that event, selection for both our cross country and alpine teams will have to take place this coming winter season.

Haliburton has been involved in the Ontario Senior Games from the beginning and is one of its largest and most active districts.

Angelica Blenich Echo staff

Mickey Hansard tosses the bocce ball on June 9 at the West Guilford community centre. Hansard was one of 12 players from the Ontario Senior Games Alliance's Haliburton-Muskoka district 55+ category attempting to qualify for the district level.

Athletes end tremendous season

Rebecca Potter
Special to the Times

Dozens packed the Northern Lights Pavilion for the year-end Haliburton Highlands Secondary School athletics banquet on June 14. There were many thanks to go around as teachers, coaches, students and athletes received recognition for their hard work over the year.

Throughout the course of the night, team after team piled onto the stage, where the crowd cheered them on for their accomplishments and MVPs were named. But the whole night was not just about the athletes – all the coaches were called onto the stage and given a thank you by their students, basketball coach Roland Zilla received a signed basketball from his team and his wife Elke Zilla gave a speech about his coaching career.

Before the major awards were announced, the traditional slideshow and video montage of the years' sports played to everyone's delight. The major and minor awards were given out to 18 students involved in various school sports, while the excellence award was given to Jenna Dibblee and Jesse Schmidt. The intramural award was given to Joshua Wright, who not only competed in intramurals, but also went to OFSAA for Nordic skiing.

"[He] is a very positive role model for all athletes, and showed strong leadership as he took many of the novice athletes under his wing and helped share his talents with them," said skiing coach Sharon Dibblee.

The students gave the impact award to Ron Hisey, the school's bus driver, who they felt made an impact on their school athletics program. The crowd gave a huge round of applause for Hisey, even though he was unable to attend the night's event.

"The thing that we love most about Ron is that he genuinely cares about our athletics and how we do; he even comes to watch our games so that he'll know how good we're doing," said athlete Tara O'Sullivan.

"If Ron we're here, I'd tell him that he's always been a huge part of the sports we play, and this year we'd like to give him some recognition."

Last, the female and male athlete of the year awards was given. Senior girls' soccer coach Amy Klose gave the female athlete of the year award to Jenna Dibblee, who received three awards already, and participates on the badminton, volleyball, soccer and basketball team, and is captain of the latter three.

"She inspired the other girls through passion for the sport and love of the game. She's very dependable, committed and always positive; encouraging other to do their best, and didn't let herself get down when she was injured," said Klose.

Next, senior boys' soccer coach Robin Gervais awarded the male athlete of the year award to Jesse Schmidt. Schmidt was part of the wrestling, badminton and soccer teams, and had been awarded three times that night. His coach commended him on his ability to lead by example and his overall great example for the team.

Both Schmidt and Dibblee thanked the crowd for their standing ovation, and thanked their coaches, teachers and most importantly their teammates.

Memories of a different car culture and simple people

Passing Lane

Joe Duarte,

QMI Agency

joe.duarte@sunmedia.ca

It started when a friend said he remembered buying his first car for $350 (whereas now one of his prized possessions is a $3,000 guitar) and he remembers doing everything in his car. He's a few years older than I am, so he got to experience things even I couldn't.

The car culture was different then – more about the freedom of having a car, rather than the envy it created in others – before the big changes started to take effect in the '70s. And I got to thinking, there were things we did in our cars that we don't do now.

Things we didn't do then, that we do now.

For example, many of us didn't think twice about picking up hitchhikers. Maybe we got lucky, but we didn't even consider the hitcher might be an escaped lunatic.

Maybe we were naive because we didn't have the instantaneous coverage due to today's mobile connectivity (maybe it was happening with the same regularity, but we just didn't hear about it). It's not to say that today's hitchhikers are all bad, but rather that the first thing many of us think of is that they might be.

I could be wrong but I also don't think couples make out in cars as much as they did 35 or 40 years ago. It's not that today's cars are horribly uncomfortable (some of them actually have more room in the rear seat than many of yesterday's full-size cars). It's just that today's graduated licences mean that beginner drivers are usually graduating high school by the time they can take the car out on their own, whereas we were 16 or 17.

It's tough to take a drive out to the point when (a) you have to have somebody with you over the age of 18 who has a full license and (b) you usually can't be out driving after dark.

"Um, Dad ... can you drive me and Susie out to the point and then leave us with the car and walk around for a bit? About 10 minutes should be good ..."

And lastly, some of us didn't really think twice about taking along a beer for the road, and cupholders weren't really a commonplace item then, so we used to hold the bottle between our legs. And we didn't really wear seatbelts unless we wanted to.

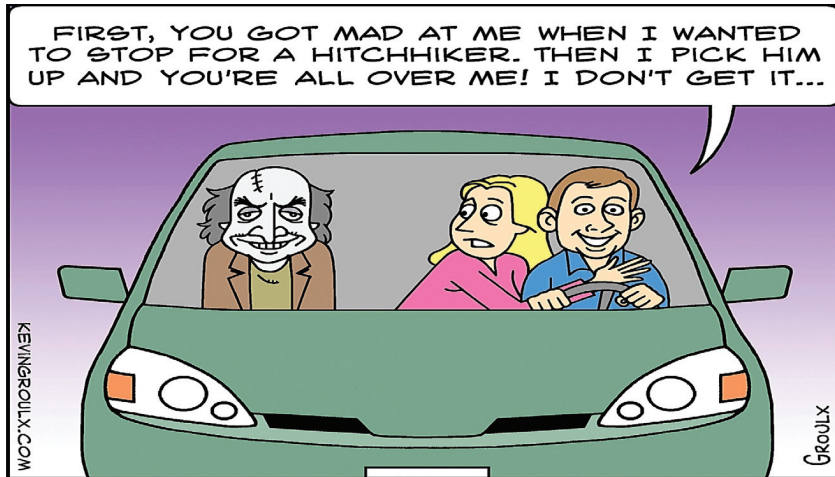

I remember a friend who used to always grab a beer when he was driving on any trip, even if he were just going downtown.

He said it made him more relaxed and he felt it actually improved his driving. He also said that he didn't particularly like riding in a car when I was driving because the fact I always put on my seatbelt made him think I didn't trust my own driving, so he felt less safe. Times and things were simpler then; and in many cases I guess we were too.

Countdown to Kinmount Jamboree

Patti Fleury
Around the Town

brucefleury@nexicom.net

The story of Lucky Lou, the tiny kitten rescued from the Mimay landfill site had a happy ending. At my daughter Caitlin's recent garage sale, she jokingly asked a neighbour if his family could find room for a new kitten. Imagine her surprise when the answer was yes! Their beloved eleven year-old cat had recently died and, though preferring a longer interval before a new arrival, he was touched by Lou's story. As difficult as it was to let her go Cait reports that the kitten is now thriving in her new home. Our young cat Jake has shown himself responsible enough to be allowed outside, although I must confess to a sense of relief every time the tiny neck bell sounds his arrival back on the porch. Each bug, blade and butterfly is a new delight as Jake's world expands beyond the earlier confines of the screen porch.

The countdown to the fourth annual Kinmount Country Jamboree at the fairgrounds is fast drawing to a close with the opening day Thursday, June 23. Activities continue through Sunday, June 26 with an all star musical cast, plus Open Mic sessions, great food and trailer camping on site. For specific information please visit www.kinmount-fair.net or call 705 488-2372. The end of the jamboree blends into Canada Day celebrations on Sunday, June 26 with free admission to the fairgrounds starting at 5 p.m. There will be something for the whole family with a picnic, barbecue, games, wagon and pony rides and a firework display at dusk. Happy birthday Canada.

Did you know that the City of Kawartha Lakes will be providing a rural bus service either on a weekly or biweekly basis to area communities? Here in Kinmount, a bus will travel to Lindsay and return every other Monday beginning July 4 with pickup at 9 a.m. at the library and arrival at Lindsay Square Mall at 10:14 a.m. The return trip departs from the mall at 4 p.m., arriving back in Kinmount at 5:14 p.m. The cost is only $2, with a reduced fare of $1.50 for seniors and students. This will be a pilot project evaluated on need and use, so here is a chance to support what could be a very valued service in the rural area. For more details check out the City of Kawartha Lakes website.

The Legion Branch 441 Kinmount's annual yard sale, bake sale and barbecue goes this Saturday, June 25 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the parking lot at the branch. There will be bargains galore with something for everyone. Speaking of bargains, later that evening at 8 p.m., it's karaoke with back forty with no admission charge.

The Artists at the Station series will continue through July and August on Saturdays and Sundays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the gazebo beside the Kinmount Railway Station. On the Canada Day long weekend, area artist Brenda Mulholland whose historic mural graces the post office's south wall, will be welcoming visitors to view her current textural acrylic paintings in the station. Be sure to visit the Model Railroad and Museum open Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Sunday noon to 3 p.m., on long weekends only.

Strawberries will be the menu highlight at the Galway Hall Committee's annual Strawberry Supper coming up on Saturday, July 2 from 4:30 to 7 p.m. Treat yourself to a delicious buffet, plus plenty of whipped cream to top off those berries. Admission at the door and for more information please call 705 488- 2217.

Gardens are coming into full bloom so the Kinmount Garden Tour on Saturday, July 9 is a pleasant way to enjoy new scenery and meet others with an interest in gardening. The tour runs from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. with passports and tickets at the gazebo by the railway station, or call 705 488-2266.

The 2011 edition of the "Heritage in the Village Festival" will be celebrated from July 13 to 16 with daily special events including the very popular "Ghost Tour" on Wednesday, July 13 (rain date July 14). If you dare, then meet at the railway station at 8:30 p.m. and accompany local author/historian Guy Scott on this free tour as he leads the way through town sharing legends, tales and myths of Kinmount's past. Music in the Park will host a special Festival Edition starting at 6:30 p.m. on July 14 at the picnic pavilion area in Austin Sawmill Heritage Park, not only presenting its weekly enjoyable evening of music but also a delicious barbecue.

The next event will be at the Kinmount Community Centre with surprises in store with the finale on Saturday, July 16 as the town falls under the spell of Moonlight Mania from 5 to 10 p.m. New features this year will include free hot air balloon rides sponsored by Re-Max Realty and the first annual toy boat race (705-488-1101). Favourites from other years are the rubber duck derby, outdoor bingo, street vendors (705-488-2961), wagon and pony rides, classic car display (705-488-1706) and the soap box derby with forms available at Gateway Variety.

Fisher's bike journey continues

Gina Atkinson
Stanhope Life
705-489-1397
pinereflections@sympatico.ca

Let's have an update on Bruce Fisher! As you all know by now, Bruce is on his bicycle once again on his trip out east to St. John's N.L. for the Special Olympics - Ontario team - Haliburton County Red Wolves).

This week, he reached Hawkesbury, Ontario with his niece Tara, together they will carry on to Quebec.

Each Saturday morning, you can hear them on Canoe FM (call letters CKHA) 100.9 on your radio, or catch the latest news on www.canoe.fm.

There have been many donations, prayers and good wishes for this endeavour and it is most appreciated. You can make a donation by sending a cheque payable to Special Olympics - Ontario in care of Bruce Fisher, 1006 Northern Lights Dr., Algonquin Highlands, Ont., K0M 1J1.

There is a long ride ahead - let's make it a success.

This has been an interesting last few days for me. My in-laws have been visiting our area and unlike all those jokes about in-laws, I actually love mine! They appreciate that are lives are complicated right now and do not expect anything from us.

In the past, I would go all out and make a pretty good dinner for any of our guests, then take time off to drive them around.

That's not the case with Nigel's mom and dad; they did not want to be in the way and stayed at a cottage, and they even made fancy dinners for us both nights. After dinner, we played a few games of euchre which is something I really enjoy. Keeps the brain sharp... maybe.

During the days, my mother-in-law made me at least half a dozen crochet dish cloths, and a couple pairs of knitted socks. She must be very grateful that I married her son! What else could it be?

June and Bernard (they call themselves Benny and Joon) moved out to Vancouver Island over 16 years ago to pursue their dream.

It was special to have them here since both of their birthdays fell in June with Father's Day. Next year we will try and get out and see them, something to look forward to!

Have a great week!
